InnoMedia Provides Cable Operators More Options for the Enterprise Voice Market

Introducing InnoMedia's SIP-Enabled 4-port business class EMTA with Battery Backup

San Jose, CA — February 5, 2007-- InnoMedia™, a leading supplier of Internet and broadband access IP telephony solutions, today announced a new business class 4-port Embedded Multimedia Terminal Adapter(EMTA) with Battery Backup.

InnoMedia's new EMTA 6528-4B features an internal battery capable of supporting up to 4 hours of talk time during power outages. In addition to features currently found in the commercially deployed EMTA 3528-4e, the EMTA 6528-4B is SIP enabled for PacketCable Multimedia and is future proof. Together with the EMTA 6528-12 which offers 12 FXS voice ports with an amphenol connector, InnoMedia is delivering the most comprehensive line of enterprise voice products to the Cable industry.

"We are very pleased to introduce this new line of products which are also SIP-based for cable operators and their enterprise customers," said Shailesh Patel, Senior Director of Product Management, InnoMedia, Inc.

Designed for DOCSIS 2.0 cable networks, InnoMedia's EMTA is an embedded multi-voice port MTA device that offers Cable Operators an excellent opportunity to deliver telephony services to their enterprise markets. It provides a rich set of business features including ground start, loop start and OSI: 900ms open loop for PBX disconnect; Fax support with T.38 and G.711 fallback; and Modem support with high speed modem pass through (v.34 and V.90) and low speed modem (Bell 103, 212) for credit card reader transactions.

The InnoMedia EMTA works with PacketCable provisioning, 16 SIDS, and a wide variety of call features including Caller ID, Call Waiting, Call Forwarding, Call Return, Caller ID Blocking, Call Trace, Automatic Callback, as well as device based 3-way calling. A UPS port in the EMTA 6528-4 and EMTA 6528-12 allows external batteries to be used to offer primary line voice services.
